I don't know if this email address is still valid, but I figured I'd try.

When you taught BLAW (civil suit) at New Mexico State University in the fall of 2007, I took your class. Beyond that, I spoke with you briefly when you represented a home buyer against a construction company (I worked with Joseph Holmes, and Mark Filosa mediated the case).

Beyond all of that, I'd like to thank you for being a great professor, and more importantly, a very effective professor. I feel as though your instruction in the blaw class was definitely superior and generally more insightful than the torts class I am currently enrolled in. It seems that we brush over topics quickly, whereas you brought us into the depth of the decisions and rules of law that applied. Because I took your class, I feel I am more than adequately prepared for law school, its tests, and how to apply principles of law to the facts before me.

Thank you very much for your instruction, and I hope this email finds you well.
